Sheila and Bill,

The following is the limiting instruction that we propose:

Ladies and gentlemen,

You have just heard a recording of statements that were made outside of the courtroom. As I have explained on prior occasions, the Rules of Evidence sometimes limit your ability to consider statements made outside of the courtroom. You may not consider the statements on the recording you just heard in determining whether or not what any of the speakers said is true. You may, however, consider the statements in determining what effect the statements may have had on listeners.
